

ADVISES VETERANS TO BOLSTER THE "FAINT OF HEART"

Martin Stresses Necessity of Keeping "Muscles Strong and Powder Dry"

HARRISBURG SPEAKER

V. F. W. Leaders Urged To Make Their Voices Heard Throughout the Nation

HARRISBURG, July 16 (INS)—The nation's veterans had a call today from U. S. Sen. Edward Martin to preach the necessity of keeping America's "muscles strong and its powder dry."

The former commanding general of the 28th division declared that ex-servicemen must bolster the "faint of heart and the indifferent..." in this time of world cleavage between two dominant philosophies.

Martin addressed Veterans of Foreign Wars leaders last night on the eve of the organization's annual four-day encampment in Harrisburg. The convention will conclude Saturday with election of officers.

Urging veterans to make their voices heard throughout the nation, he said:

"Teach that our system stresses the freedom of dignity of the individual. Its foundation is that government is the servant of the people and not their master. Teach that the controlling philosophy in Europe and Asia makes the State the master and the people its servants."

"Preach that our kind of life emphasizes self-reliance while dictatorship emphasizes dependence upon a central, all-powerful government."

Martin asserted that the continued existence of the American way is dependent upon freedom and self-reliance.

"He warned that in recent years there has been a tendency to drift away from the philosophy which built America."

"There has been excessive concentration of power and authority in Washington," he declared, "a centralization which has tended to drain away some of the precious freedoms of our people. Let us regain these freedoms because they will make us stronger to face the growing world conflict of ideologies."

Another necessary step toward strengthening the nation is the universal training of its youth, Martin declared.

Opponents of the program must realize that "properly trained manpower is the best defense this country can have," he asserted. The stronger the nation, he added, "the less chance there will be of any other nation picking on us."

Martin warned Soviet Russia had a larger standing army than the United States and was "drilling and teaching its young men to fight and to defend themselves." In view of this, he added, it was not surprising that Communists in America oppose the training of American youth.

He said veterans must also counteract the "poison" being spread that the Soviet system was better than America's because it has never had depressions and unemployment.

The Russians solve those problems with the slave labor system, Martin declared.

"There are more permanently enslaved workers in the Soviet Union than there were unemployed in the United States at the very depths of our depression," he added.

Veterans must educate the public in the necessity of keeping the United States financially sound "if the country is to remain a beacon

THE CAPITOL WHIRL

A Digest of Things Political Occurring At Harrisburg

HARRISBURG, July 16 — Some of Gov. James H. Duff's attaches have this anecdote to tell, typifying the chief executive's dislike of fanfare. The governor had been asked to address a certain convention in Harrisburg and he promised he would drop in on the meeting at a specified time enroute to his office on Capitol Hill. Duff walked, unaccompanied, from the executive mansion to the convention hall where the meeting was underway.

There was no committee to meet him and the delegates paid no attention to him, so he quietly took a seat at the back of the room. The governor sat there for a half hour, unrecognized, and then was forced to leave to keep another appointment.

The other victim is George Smith, Doylestown, who lost a wrist watch and $10 in cash.

In both instances the wallets had been placed back in the lockers. The locker doors had been opened with keys or wire, it is said, and were not forced.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

Airborne Greek reinforcements halted a guerrilla drive on Yania yesterday 19 miles from the capital of Epirus. Athens said 2,500 "rebels" were in a trap near the Albanian border and quoted prisoners as admitting that an "international brigade" was participating in the fighting. Efforts by the United States to force speedy action on the report of the United Nations Balkan Inquiry Commission failed to muster sufficient votes in the Security Council.

In another Balkan country, Roumania, 100 leaders of the opposition, including Dr. Maniu, Peasant party chief, were reported arrested in a new round-up.

The 16-nation Paris conference mapping Europe's response to the Marshall plan created working committees that will function through the summer and adjourned until late August.

President Truman, in signing the Second Decontrol Act giving him control over exports, implied that he would use his powers to favor nations co-operating in the Marshall plan. State executives at the annual Conference of Governors, after hearing Secretary Marshall, were in general agreement that full public support must be rallied behind the Marshall plan.

MORE TRUMAN INFLATION

President Truman has kicked about high prices ever since he has been in office. Yet he is responsible for more skyrocketing of prices than any other one man in American history.

His term of office has been a parade of different varieties of inflation.

We are having the "boom." The "bust" is on its way. Unhappily, the "boom" we have been having has no more real substance than a swelling soap-bubble—which it greatly resembles.

The various inflationary steps which President Truman has taken are much too numerous to list in full.

First and foremost was his decision, two summers ago, to back up labor bosses in their demand for large wage increases immediately after the war ended.

These wage boosts were not economically sound. Production was declining—total production and per-man production. The President was warned that the wage increases he was urging were inflationary—that they were bound to push prices up.

But he supported the labor chieftains in insisting on them. He ordered OPA not to let prices rise. He might as well have told his bureaucrats to stop the ocean's tide from coming in. OPA couldn't hold back the price "bulges"—and wrecked itself and the Democratic chances for last year in trying.

The President had been sold on a theory in economics. The theory sounded good, but was cockeyed. It put the cart before the horse.

Because mass-production, increasing the amount of output per worker, therefore also permits him to be paid higher wages, the President thought it would be all right to give the workers the higher wages first, and tell production to catch up.

This didn't work. The American people had to pay the cost of the experiment in their grocery bills and other articles which they had to buy. Prices soared. Inflation took another spurt.

Every financial program which President Truman has laid down has been highly inflationary. There are really three of these. When the war ended, two years ago, drastic revision of government spending was in order. The President had it in his power to "balance the budget" then. He could and should have stopped all war-spending at once, and pulled the costs of government down well inside the revenues.

Natural Science Ass'n Also Given Information On Wasps and Moths

SESSION AT NEWTOWN

NEWTOWN, July 16—Description of a motor tour through Mexico, presented by Miss Gertrude H. Smith, Haddonfield, N. J., and two talks on wasps and butterflies and moths, formed the program of Bucks County Natural Science Association on grounds of the Friends Meeting House here, Saturday afternoon.

Attended by about 35 members, the meeting was in charge of the president, Stephenson W. Fletcher, Jr., and during the business session announcement was made of the resignation of the secretary, Mrs. S. Paul Woodman, who, with her husband, will move to Virginia. Miss Julia Halderston was appointed to fill Mrs. Woodman's unexpired term.

Two new members, Henry W. Fowler and Miss Sara L. Gilbert, were welcomed. Announcement was made also of the recent death of three members, Sarah W. Brown, Yardley, a charter member of the association; Herman Terry, of this place, and Francis C. Pyle, George School, for many years a member of the association.

Margaret Styer gave an account of the meeting of the Delaware Valley Naturalists' Union at the Bartram Gardens, Philadelphia, in May. The first assigned subject was discussed by Mrs. George Watson, Doylestown, who spoke on wasps, which she described as useful insects to man. She showed a small piece of a wasp's nest, and described how it is made of wood, which first is chewed by the wasps.

Each cell, it was explained, contains a cell. About three weeks, the members were told, are required for a larva to develop into a wasp. The males have white faces and do not sting. Wasps, it was said, consume a large amount of water, and have four wings. Hornets and yellowjackets are also in the wasp family, and the yellowjackets and mud wasps are often found around muddy places. They pack their nests with spiders to provide food for the young.

The second speaker was Miss Alma Campbell, Sellersville, who on previous occasions addressed the association. Using colored charts and large printed posters, Miss Campbell gave an interesting and

"Knew Only Norwegian"

NATURAL B. PETTINGILL

"The Gentleman from Indiana"

Congressman Harold Knutson, Chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, was born in Norway. As a child, he lived in a sod house on the Minnesota prairie and says it was snug and warm. He was fifteen years old "before he knew that God understood any language except Norwegian." So, he said his prayers in his native tongue. With such a background, some folks would probably have called him an "underprivileged child." But today he is key man on America's taxes, and one of the half dozen most important figures in Washington.

Knutson regards his mother as the greatest American he ever knew. "Time and again she gathered her brood of eleven children around her and told them to thank God to the last breath they would ever draw that He had given them the chance to grow up in a free land. The sod house boy came to Congress thirty years ago and is the last of those who voted against World War I. This son of Norwegian seafarers believes in sweat, thrift and freedom. His predecessor, as Chairman of this great Committee, the Honorable Bob Doughton of North Carolina, believes in them also. Both have voted twice to reduce the taxes, which President Truman insists you should pay."

JACK SLIPS; MAN IS PINNED UNDER TRUCK

Alfred Denton Injured As He Replaces Springs In A Burlington Fire Truck

BURLINGTON, N. J., July 16—When one of two large jacks slipped from beneath a fire engine he was servicing in the station of Hope Fire Co., High street, yesterday afternoon, Alfred Denton, 38, of Bloomfield, N. J., sustained a fracture of the pelvis and possible back injuries.

Firemen at one end of the fire station heard Denton's screams, and rushed to his aid. They were able to raise the LaFrance machine off Denton and he was taken to Burlington County Hospital, Mt. Holly, in an ambulance.

Denton, an employee of the La France Company, was placing heavier springs in the rear of the comparatively new truck. Two large jacks held up the rear of the vehicle and two smaller jacks were also in place. It is stated that one of the larger jacks slipped, pinning Denton beneath part of the undercarriage, although full weight of the truck did not press upon him.

At the hospital this morning Denton's condition was reported a "fairly good."

PEOPLE WILL PAY THE BILL

Since a soft coal strike at this time would have thrown the national economy completely out of gear we may give thanks that John L. Lewis and the operators have reached an agreement. But we will be guilty of a very special and dangerous act of self-delusion if we imagine that the immunity granted us is inexpensive. Nor should we be too quick to join Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the United States Steel Corporation, in his belief that there will be industrial peace in the bituminous industry "for a long time to come."

The truth is, on the one hand, that the new contract with its provision for a wage increase of unprecedented proportions will inevitably give the cost of living an ever upward kick. Every industrial plant in the country, every public utility, every railroad, and every producer of goods who uses coal will find his expenses so much higher that he can hardly avoid raising the price of what he has to sell. In a word, it is a tremendous victory which Mr. Lewis has won for the miners but it is a defeat for the American people.

On the other hand, the expectation that the mining of coal will now proceed without any interruption may prove illusory. To be sure, the miners will not strike for a year at least—but there is a provision in the contract which permits them to take a vacation whenever it suits their whim or in order to remedy a real or fancied grievance. They are required to work, says the agreement, only when they are "willing and able" to do so. In view of John L. Lewis' history there is no certainty that advantage will not be freely taken of this escape clause.

While welcoming the prospect of reasonable peace in the industry we may as well confess that once again we have done this thing rather badly. For months and months it was known that the return of the mines from government to owners on July 1 would be accompanied by a certain crisis. Yet it is only now that a settlement has been arranged. The result is a loss of production which, while small so far, is wholly needless.

WHAT GASOLINE SHORTAGE?

What became of the "gasoline shortage" which was so enthusiastically predicted by foes of free enterprise a few weeks ago? Gasoline rationing, they hopefully feared, was just around the corner. To date there have been no reports of motorists being stranded anywhere, unable to get gas for the trip home.

Summer tourist travel is setting a new record and the cars are floating or limping right along. But the gasoline-shortage school of thought is not licked permanently. Doubtless it is busily engaged at this instant thinking up a new dire calamity that is sure to befall the country.

Freedom doesn't require tolerating isms that destroy freedom. Permitting an enemy to poison you is proof of imbecility, not tolerance.

He didn't do so. He "let things coast." He did cancel a number of long-term appropriations—but this was merely routine. They were items which had been lined up on the basis of the war running two or three years longer. His "economics" were entirely in the field of distant-future spending. The day-to-day extravagance of the New Dealers wasn't touched.

This was an inflationary decision. Still more obviously inflationary were the two annual budgets he has submitted since then, calling for much the highest peace-time budgets and taxes the country has even seen—ten times what used to be normal, four or five times the biggest pre-war Roosevelt budgets.

Recent weeks have seen two new varieties of Truman inflation. One has to do with the so-called "Marshall program" of calling upon the American people to underwrite the costs of a score or so European governments in rebuilding war damage—and getting ready for a Third World War with Russia!

This is inflationary for a very simple reason. This country doesn't really have either the cash or the credit to finance this gigantic undertaking—which is beginning to have the earmarks of a new, super-duper WPA project.

Our nation already is in debt, one way and another, for considerably more than the total value of all the assets and resources owned by the American people. And, as we have begun to realize, we are tax-poor—we can't really afford to support our own government in the style to which it has become accustomed to live, let alone finance a couple of dozen improvident governments in Europe and elsewhere.

The single word, "inflation," tells the whole answer to the inevitable question about the Marshall-Truman doctrines: "Where's the money coming from?"

Still another piece of inflation, which will have a large effect upon price levels, and which again traces directly to the White House, is the new labor contract jammed through by John L. Lewis on behalf of the nation's coal miners.

This is inflationary because the cost of the wage increases and other concessions to the miners is being tacked directly on the price of coal. That means that coal itself will be considerably higher. It means also that everything which uses coal—especially the basic commodity of steel—will also rise in price.

This new contract, which probably will be copied by other union groups as rapidly as they are able to do so, is the inevitable consequence of President Truman's opposition to the Taft-Hartley Labor Act, and his intemperate remarks about it while the fight was on.

He in effect told labor that he would back them up in any attack on the new law—either a head-on attack, or an attempt to by-pass it. The Lewis coal contract is an open effort to get around the restrictions which Congress attempted to write, after a mandate from the American people, on such labor agreements.

Here again there is a cock-eyed theory of economics in the background—a piece of idiocy which is part and parcel of the Keynes' theory of "an expanding economy" which is rapidly wrecking the British Empire.

The theory is something like this: that the "spread" between original cost and final sales price can be widened indefinitely. If the central government is made strong enough to compel people to buy at the higher prices and stop their complaining about the cost of living.

Take coal. In the ground, it is worth nothing, or next door to it. Its cost is the total of the wages paid to dig it, plus a relatively small royalty to the owners, plus the overhead of management and management's investments, plus transportation.

The new theory of economics is that any conceivable amount of "profit" can be saddled on top of these costs. In the present instance, it is labor rather than management which wants to extract a much larger "profit" at the expense of the ultimate consumer.

Now, if coal were an essential commodity with no competition, perhaps there might be something in the theory; but coal has many competitors—water power, electricity, oil, gas, etc. In a free economy, the top selling price for coal, roughly speaking, is the price which meets these various types of competition.

The big coal strike twenty years ago, which also was the work of John L. Lewis, was the worst disaster which ever hit the coal industry. Why? Because it opened the door to the competitors of coal.

Oil-burners first became common at that time. Their somewhat higher costs were compensated for by the fact that oil was believed to be in steady supply. That was the time when the pressure began for the national government to start building huge power plants. Again, why? So that electricity might be available when strikes interrupted the supply of coal. At that time, also, people first began to take a serious interest in heating with gas and electricity.

The coal industry has never regained the place in American economy, or any measure of the prosperity, which it had enjoyed prior to that disastrous strike. John L. Lewis has grieved openly and eloquently many times for the plight of coal miners—and no one who has had contacts with the industry is going to deny that it is a hard and dangerous way to earn a living.

But Lewis has never been frank enough to admit that his stubborn strike twenty years ago crippled the industry in a fashion from which it has never recuperated.

I likewise with his present contract. At the moment he is on top of the world. He is the envy of all other labor bosses, and his contract is something they hope to use as a model.

But this contract may prove the death-blow to the coal industry.

If he can tack $1.20 a day onto mine wages this time, he can tack $2.40 next year, and $10, $20 or $50 any time in the future. The sky's the limit, once the laws of business economics are abandoned.

This is more than a "bulge"—it's a break-through. The drift towards coal substitutes will be accelerated as never before. The picture of continual interruptions in supply and constantly rising prices can have no other effect.

There is only one institution which could head off that threat of competition which will eventually put coal mining virtually out of business—and that would be a labor dictatorship at Washington, powerful enough to tell the American people that they had to go on buying coal, whether they could afford it or not.

The costs of this experiment in screw-ball economics is going to be carried by those who are not immediately able to move over to other fuels and heating-devices, and therefore will have to keep on buying coal at the higher prices—for the time being. And that makes it another chapter in Truman inflation!

The state department of internal affairs has reported that St. Paul's Episcopal church in Phillipsburg was the first house of worship in the world to be lighted with electricity. The event occurred in 1881, the department said. The first factory in the United States to manufacture screws also was located near the Centre County community, the department added. The plant, constructed in 1821, had a capacity of 1,000 gross of screws until 1836, when the Iron Forge burned. The department said the land on which Phillipsburg was built was purchased by a Manchester, England, firm at an auction in Philadelphia for what was estimated to be about two cents an acre.

Fish Commissioner Charles French, of Ellwood City, was given official status on the agency July 10 by Gov. James H. Duff, after serving since 1943 without portfolio. French, the unanimous non-political choice of sportsmen in 1937 to head the commission, served until 1943 when his appointment expired and Governor Martin failed to make a reappointment but allowed him to serve until a successor was qualified. Reason for the decision was that some Republican leaders, believing French to be an ardent Democrat because he was named by ex-Governor Earle, opposed his reappointment and a division developed among sportsmen. It is customary for Governors to appoint only a man acceptable to sportsmen's organizations and French's appointment, which must be confirmed by the state senate during the next special or regular meeting of the legislature, was an indication that support had crystallized behind the commissioner.

Appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee the other day, the distinguished economist, Dr. Willford I. King, gave Mr. Truman's tax veto a stiff uppercut. He pointed out that "if the tax rate in the highest bracket was 99.9% and was reduced to 99%, the 'take-home' pay of the taxpayer would be increased 99.9%." That's the Truman logic in reverse. In short, instead of $1 of "take-home" pay, a taxpayer would have $10 left out of $1,000 of income.

John L. Lewis, the "oil burner" number one salesman, has gotten most of his men a wage boost of around 40c an hour despite the "slave-labor" bills. This makes him, again, the leader of all labor leaders. He makes the 21c an hour leaders look naked.

As the automobile, steel, railroad, building, and other workers watch the cost of their coal go up another 75c a ton, they will demand more pay also. Lewis is an able man. He simply uses the monopoly power which the New Deal traded him for votes. It gave him the power to bargain with an entire industry and hold the nation in ransom. And how the labor union boys, who don't like him, but will now have to pay more for coal, fought every effort of Congress to outlaw the industry-wide bargaining which gives John his half-Nelson. John just leads them around-and-around.

It all goes back to the quaint notion that dollars are what count and not coal, spuds and hoe-cake. We wind up paying $4 for a dollar watch that loses time.

Here's an item from the Wall Street Journal worth a close squint. It shows that the farm hands have gotten a bigger wage boost these past years than the organized city workers. Yet city workers pay dues to a union to get them a raise, and farm workers aren't unionized and pay nobody for their raises. Probably the un-organized house maids also have gotten as high a per cent in wage increases as the union workers. How do you explain that? Of course, it couldn't be the old law of supply and demand because the New Deal officially repealed that ten years ago. It puzzles me no end. Labor leaders, please explain how the farm hands did it.

This does not mean that labor unions do not perform some useful services for their men. But unless a union has a monopoly stranglehold on jobs, the facts indicate that something beside collective bargaining is responsible for wage increases.

What's a Penny Worth?

POOR KID! There was a time when her penny bought two pieces of candy. Now it's usually one, and mighty scant selection at that.

But with her mother things are different... at least when it comes to electricity. A penny will pay for several hours of her favorite radio programs or take care of a lot of household chores.

For while prices of most things have gone up, electricity has come down. During the past fifteen years the price of electricity has been cut nearly in half. At the same time the helpfulness of electricity has increased to such an extent that the average home now uses more than twice as much as formerly. Naturally, this doubled use keeps bills from being lower even at reduced prices... but it certainly spells a lot more for your money every time you snap an electric switch.
